

HE STABBED A RACE HORSE.HETTY GREEN IS WIDE AWAKE

Scanton Admits Injuring "Great Eastern" for Revenge.

Said to Have Been an Accomplice in Burning a Big Stable.

Great Eastern, a racehorse, was maliciously cut about the legs while stabled in the Mutual Club stables, 125 West Fifty-sixth street, on the night of Jan. 19 last. Suspicion fell on Michael Scanlon, 29 East Fifty-eighth street, who had been discharged for drunkenness a few days previously. He had lotted about the stable, and had threatened to "get square."

On circumstantial evidence a warrant was issued against Scanlon two days later on complaint of Supt. Timothy J. Fincken. It was given to Agent Evans, of the S. P. C. A., but he was unable to find Scanlon, who fled to Jersey City, and kept away until two days ago.

Last evening at 5 o'clock he was arrested at his home by Patrolman Phillips, of the East Fifty-first street station, on a charge of disorderly conduct. He was found in the rooms and had ways littered with broken furniture, and Scanlon demolishing everything in his reach.

He was hurried into a chair at Phillips' subdialy and the man, who had dodged it, after a sharp struggle subdued the run-raged man. On the way to the police station Scanlon told the officer that he had been wanted for stabbing the horse, but Great Eastern, owned by Ben Levy, the sporting man, who is at present in Washington, D. C., further said that he had stabbed the horse.

This morning when the prisoner was arraigned at Yorkville Court Agent Evans executed the warrant for cutting the horse.

Evans recognized the prisoner as the man who had been arrested seven years ago for the arson of a stable. Hartwell, for setting fire to a stable in Hartwell, twenty-five horses were burned to death. He escaped conviction for lack of evidence. Scanlon was held to $2,000 bail for examination on Sunday morning.

"NOT BILL COOK, THE OUTLAW."

Two Prisoners from Guthrie Crete a Site at a Hotel.

When United States Marshal John M. Hale, of Guthrie, and Lawyer H. B. Mitchell, of Oklahoma, who acted as assistant, arrived at Smith & McNeil's Hotel last night with John Myers, sentenced for five years for perjury, and George Howell, to ten years for manslaughter, a report was started that one of the men was Bill Cook, the noted outlaw.

Every guest in the hotel last night double-bolted his door and pushed up his curtain there was in the room against it.

This morning when the Marshal and his prisoners breakfasted guests crowded around the hotel to get a look, and when the news reached the streets a crowd collected. Mitchell Howland, the man who was supposed to be Bill Cook, was seen with gun and eggs in the most unconvincing dress.

One old man with whiskers which looked as if they had been grown in a nest, and a young man with a face of desperation to such an extent that he drugged himself into a beautiful condition of intoxication, after which he lay down and slept, were identified as the two who were in the case, as well as those who had been in the case.

John M. Hale, the lawyer, who was continuing the trial, said: "My God! who took it up where some other lawyer had left off at the last hearing."

Today, however, to-day the same old ground was gone over. During a full one of the witnesses remarked that it was very warm.

The referee, who was the referee, who is inclined to cynicism, then he gently nodded and drifted into an occasionally interrupted doze his chin resting gently on his hand.

Then Mr. Ogden called off a list of names, like a school teacher calling the roll, and to every name the witness answered: "Yes."

While the death roll was in progress Miss Sylvia A. M. Green, looking very pale, stood smiling and in took a seat near the door.

The referee, who had fallen asleep again, snored, and wakened himself with a start.

"That's the way it's been for three years," neatly Mrs. Green.

"Why hasn't this estate been closed up?" the property turned over to the trustee?"

"Mrs. Green wouldn't consent to it because she had to go West."

EPIDEMIC OF BURGLARIES.

Many Business Places Robbed by the Same Gang.

A tall, gaunt negro with a little tuft of whiskers on his chin, walked into the lobby of Centre street and Broadway and Reade and Duane streets are in a state of alarm over the many burglaries within two or three weeks. They are outspoken at the seeming inability of the police to arrest any of the offenders.

"Bad man!—I'll hold you up! Look out for me!"

"One old man with whiskers which looked as if they had been grown in a nest, and a young man with a face of desperation to such an extent that he drugged himself into a beautiful condition of intoxication, after which he lay down and slept, were identified as the two who were in the case, as well as those who had been in the case."

John M. Hale, the lawyer, who was continuing the trial, said: "My God! who took it up where some other lawyer had left off at the last hearing."

Today, however, to-day the same old ground was gone over. During a full one of the witnesses remarked that it was very warm.

The referee, who was the referee, who is inclined to cynicism, then he gently nodded and drifted into an occasionally interrupted doze his chin resting gently on his hand.

Then Mr. Ogden called off a list of names, like a school teacher calling the roll, and to every name the witness answered: "Yes."

WANTED "A MÉJUM JOB."

That's What a Nice Old Colored Man Told Mayor Strong.

A tall, gaunt negro with a little tuft of whiskers on his chin, walked into the lobby of Centre street and Broadway and Reade and Duane streets are in a state of alarm over the many burglaries within two or three weeks. They are outspoken at the seeming inability of the police to arrest any of the offenders.

"Bad man!—I'll hold you up! Look out for me!"

"One old man with whiskers which looked as if they had been grown in a nest, and a young man with a face of desperation to such an extent that he drugged himself into a beautiful condition of intoxication, after which he lay down and slept, were identified as the two who were in the case, as well as those who had been in the case."

John M. Hale, the lawyer, who was continuing the trial, said: "My God! who took it up where some other lawyer had left off at the last hearing."

Today, however, to-day the same old ground was gone over. During a full one of the witnesses remarked that it was very warm.

The referee, who was the referee, who is inclined to cynicism, then he gently nodded and drifted into an occasionally interrupted doze his chin resting gently on his hand.

Then Mr. Ogden called off a list of names, like a school teacher calling the roll, and to every name the witness answered: "Yes."

PASSED CIVIL SERVICE.

New Appointments in Municipal Departments.

Secretary Lee Phillips, of the Civil-Service Examining Board, announced to-day the following appointments in the municipal service:

By the Fire Department—Feb. 7, 1895, as acting chief engineer: Frank W. G. Wolf, a lithographer, at 12 Reade street, discovered that the office had been broken into and the safe opened, and the contents of money and ornaments taken.

According to Beardorff's fifteen-year-old girl, Katie, the trouble grew out of mixed ale and whisky.

James Shorter, twenty-two years old, of 10 East Eighth-street, who threatened Beardorff with a butcher's cleaver, was held in $1,000 bail for examination on the charge of felonious assault.

According to Beardorff's fifteen-year-old girl, Katie, the trouble grew out of mixed ale and whisky.

James Shorter, twenty-two years old, of 10 East Eighth-street, who threatened Beardorff with a butcher's cleaver, was held in $1,000 bail for examination on the charge of felonious assault.

John Kelly, a brother of the prisoner, testified that his mother was confined in an insane asylum for twenty years, and an uncle had been out of his mind.

This closed the case for the defense and the arguments began.

WARRANTS FOR ACTORS.

Georgia Police Ready to Stop Train and Lotta Collins's Company.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 15.—Chief of Police Butner, of Macon, and a warrant-deputy, arrived this morning with warrants for fourteen members of the Lotta Collins Company. Two chief detectives were put at their disposal, and the four officers of the city for the railroad junction to intercept the north-bound train from Jacksonville.

The company, which booked for Savannah, had been booked for Jacksonville, but it is feared the actors might attempt to jump the State of Georgia. The police are armed and determined that the company shall go back to Macon and stand trial.

Rescued from the Angry Sons.

The steamer Karlsruhe arrived under fire from British rebels at Port Said, Egypt.

The steamer's course was changed and a boat lowered, so that proved to be the wrecked Norwegian vessel Nagard Nolin of Farsund. Felling with a large iron hook, the crew, who had been saved, and the two rebels, who had been safely landed. Then the ferrymen went on their way, and the horse was soon after hauling more snow and ice to the river.

Struck by a Cable Car.

Henry Schroeder, fourteen years old, of 139 Lexington avenue, was slightly injured to-day by being struck by a cable car at One Hundred and Second street and Third Avenue.

He was awoke from a nap in his room when he heard a noise, and when he got up he found he was lame. The boy was awoke from a nap in his room when he heard a noise, and when he got up he found he was lame.

He was awoke from a nap in his room when he heard a noise, and when he got up he found he was lame. The boy was awoke from a nap in his room when he heard a noise, and when he got up he found he was lame.

A BI-PARTISAN BOARD.MR. BROOKFIELD INITIATED.

(Continued from First Page.)

She Declares Opposing Lawyers Will Find Her Lively.

Her Referee Suit Against Barling Continued To-Day.

Great Eastern, a racehorse, was maliciously cut about the legs while stabled in the Mutual Club stables, 125 West Fifty-sixth street, on the night of Jan. 19 last. Suspicion fell on Michael Scanlon, 29 East Fifty-eighth street, who had been discharged for drunkenness a few days previously. He had lotted about the stable, and had threatened to "get square."

On circumstantial evidence a warrant was issued against Scanlon two days later on complaint of Supt. Timothy J. Fincken. It was given to Agent Evans, of the S. P. C. A., but he was unable to find Scanlon, who fled to Jersey City, and kept away until two days ago.

Last evening at 5 o'clock he was arrested at his home by Patrolman Phillips, of the East Fifty-first street station, on a charge of disorderly conduct. He was found in the rooms and had ways littered with broken furniture, and Scanlon demolishing everything in his reach.

He was hurried into a chair at Phillips' subdialy and the man, who had dodged it, after a sharp struggle subdued the run-raged man. On the way to the police station Scanlon told the officer that he had been wanted for stabbing the horse, but Great Eastern, owned by Ben Levy, the sporting man, who is at present in Washington, D. C., further said that he had stabbed the horse.

This morning when the prisoner was arraigned at Yorkville Court Agent Evans executed the warrant for cutting the horse.

"NOT BILL COOK, THE OUTLAW."

Two Prisoners from Guthrie Crete a Site at a Hotel.

When United States Marshal John M. Hale, of Guthrie, and Lawyer H. B. Mitchell, of Oklahoma, who acted as assistant, arrived at Smith & McNeil's Hotel last night with John Myers, sentenced for five years for perjury, and George Howell, to ten years for manslaughter, a report was started that one of the men was Bill Cook, the noted outlaw.

Every guest in the hotel last night double-bolted his door and pushed up his curtain there was in the room against it.

This morning when the Marshal and his prisoners breakfasted guests crowded around the hotel to get a look, and when the news reached the streets a crowd collected. Mitchell Howland, the man who was supposed to be Bill Cook, was seen with gun and eggs in the most unconvincing dress.

One old man with whiskers which looked as if they had been grown in a nest, and a young man with a face of desperation to such an extent that he drugged himself into a beautiful condition of intoxication, after which he lay down and slept, were identified as the two who were in the case, as well as those who had been in the case.

John M. Hale, the lawyer, who was continuing the trial, said: "My God! who took it up where some other lawyer had left off at the last hearing."

Today, however, to-day the same old ground was gone over. During a full one of the witnesses remarked that it was very warm.

The referee, who was the referee, who is inclined to cynicism, then he gently nodded and drifted into an occasionally interrupted doze his chin resting gently on his hand.

Then Mr. Ogden called off a list of names, like a school teacher calling the roll, and to every name the witness answered: "Yes."

While the death roll was in progress Miss Sylvia A. M. Green, looking very pale, stood smiling and in took a seat near the door.

The referee, who had fallen asleep again, snored, and wakened himself with a start.

"That's the way it's been for three years," neatly Mrs. Green.

"Why hasn't this estate been closed up?" the property turned over to the trustee?"

"Mrs. Green wouldn't consent to it because she had to go West."

That's What a Nice Old Colored Man Told Mayor Strong.

A tall, gaunt negro with a little tuft of whiskers on his chin, walked into the lobby of Centre street and Broadway and Reade and Duane streets are in a state of alarm over the many burglaries within two or three weeks. They are outspoken at the seeming inability of the police to arrest any of the offenders.

"Bad man!—I'll hold you up! Look out for me!"

"One old man with whiskers which looked as if they had been grown in a nest, and a young man with a face of desperation to such an extent that he drugged himself into a beautiful condition of intoxication, after which he lay down and slept, were identified as the two who were in the case, as well as those who had been in the case."

John M. Hale, the lawyer, who was continuing the trial, said: "My God! who took it up where some other lawyer had left off at the last hearing."

Today, however, to-day the same old ground was gone over. During a full one of the witnesses remarked that it was very warm.

The referee, who was the referee, who is inclined to cynicism, then he gently nodded and drifted into an occasionally interrupted doze his chin resting gently on his hand.

Then Mr. Ogden called off a list of names, like a school teacher calling the roll, and to every name the witness answered: "Yes."

While the death roll was in progress Miss Sylvia A. M. Green, looking very pale, stood smiling and in took a seat near the door.

The referee, who had fallen asleep again, snored, and wakened himself with a start.

"That's the way it's been for three years," neatly Mrs. Green.

"Why hasn't this estate been closed up?" the property turned over to the trustee?"

"Mrs. Green wouldn't consent to it because she had to go West."

That's What a Nice Old Colored Man Told Mayor Strong.

A tall, gaunt negro with a little tuft of whiskers on his chin, walked into the lobby of Centre street and Broadway and Reade and Duane streets are in a state of alarm over the many burglaries within two or three weeks. They are outspoken at the seeming inability of the police to arrest any of the offenders.

"Bad man!—I'll hold you up! Look out for me!"

"One old man with whiskers which looked as if they had been grown in a nest, and a young man with a face of desperation to such an extent that he drugged himself into a beautiful condition of intoxication, after which he lay down and slept, were identified as the two who were in the case, as well as those who had been in the case."

John M. Hale, the lawyer, who was continuing the trial, said: "My God! who took it up where some other lawyer had left off at the last hearing."

Today, however, to-day the same old ground was gone over. During a full one of the witnesses remarked that it was very warm.

The referee, who was the referee, who is inclined to cynicism, then he gently nodded and drifted into an occasionally interrupted doze his chin resting gently on his hand.